Customer Reviews

Another great Ben Hood read. Spoiler Alert. This one starts with Charlie Noah. Charlie is rich, stunningly beautiful, respected as a writer for newspapers and high class magazines in Australia and around the world. She is married to an extremely successful insurance high flyer and lives in a mansion overlooking Sydney Harbour. Her home is surrounded by well heeled friends who (She thought) respected and admired her. Most of the opulence surrounding her lifestyle came from her husband, Reginald Noah. Her own income was substantial but his bordered on the obscene. All was going well till Charlie discovered her husband was having an affair with a neighbor. One of many it seems. Charlie threatened to expose his affair in one of the magazines she wrote for. Reginald

Noah locked her out of the family home and that's when Charlie threatened to expose his corrupt and fraudulent dealings within the insurance company which employed him. Charlie knew she was in trouble and withdrew large amounts of money from her private bank accounts and arranged for the construction of a totally new identity complete with relevant identification papers, drivers license and certificates as well as a new off shore bank account. Its not hard when you know the right people and Charlie knew them very well. Reginald Noah was livid and knew he had to stop his wife from blowing the whistle on his less than savory acts. Stephen Pope is a hit man for hire and hire him Noah does. Ben Hood was bullied by Rod Reid into seeing a psychiatrist, Doctor Jackson Pugh, in reference to his supposed sexual hang ups. Well Ben doesn't have any but Rod sure believes he does. So Ben decided to humor Rod and see Pugh.
